

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 04 Sep 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Outbreaks of rain across central parts will clear steadily northeastwards. It will then be largely dry for a time across the UK, although there will be some showers for Scotland. Outbreaks of occasionally heavy rain will spread into western parts during the afternoon and then continue north and east thereafter. It will also become windy across southern parts.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Monday will see a mix of sunshine and showers across the UK, these heavy and slow moving across northern parts. On Tuesday a band of occasionally heavy rain will sink south across the UK. It will also be generally windy throughout.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.