Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early cloud and rain in the south will soon clear leaving sunny spells.
Elsewhere there'll be sunshine and a few showers. It will be windy in the north with blustery showers, these wintry on the hills. Overnight the wintry showers continue over Scotland. Elsewhere cloud and rain will spread across all parts, but will clear from northern England by morning.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

On Saturday the rain clears slowly south, but may linger in southwestern part all day. Elsewhere sunny spells, but with showers across Scotland. Sunday will be cold with showers in the north and west, these wintry on the highest ground.
