

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 01 Apr 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A breezy and blustery day with sunny spells, but also occasional showers. The showers being heavy at times, and still with some snow on high ground. A longer spell of rain is expected to cross Wales, southern England and the Midlands during the day. Showery rain may continue over southern England tonight. Elsewhere mainly dry with local frost and fog.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

The showery weather is expected to continue on Friday and Saturday. Most parts will see some sunshine at times but also with some heavy showers developing which could become prolonged and continue to fall as snow over the Scottish mountains.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.