++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
There will be bright spells and showers today. The showers will be heavy and possibly thundery, merging to give more prolonged rain in the west at first, and east later. Remaining windy in the south. Blustery showers will continue across north and northeast Scotland overnight. Becoming mostly dry elsewhere with clear spells and lighter winds.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Remaining cool and windy in the far north on Thursday with further showers, wintry on hills. Elsewhere it will be mostly dry with light winds and sunny spells. Friday will start mostly fine, although it could turn wet and windy in the west later.
