++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A frosty start, otherwise sunny spells today, with many inland areas dry and sunny. However, showers, perhaps wintry are expected near northern, western and some eastern coasts, locally sharp with hail. Feeling cold with brisk northwesterly winds. Tonight showers continuing near some windward coasts, otherwise a widespread, locally sharp frost under starlit skies.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Most places will remain dry with plenty of sunshine during the day, but with a widespread sharp frost overnight along with some patchy mist or fog. Cloud and some rain may edge slowly into some western areas, particularly Thursday. It will remain cold everywhere.
