++ Valid for broadcast at 2159

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Rain lying across parts of northeastern England and southern Scotland at dawn should soon ease. Otherwise generally rather cloudy, with patchy light rain and a few heavier showers, fewer and further between than of late. The best of any brighter weather should materialise in the east and the far north, although it will feel decidedly cool in far northern UK.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Remaining unsettled and rather cloudy towards midweek, with limited sunny spells. Overnight patchy light rain should become more showery by day, with some of these showers likely becoming heavy by the afternoons with a risk of thunder, particularly by Wednesday.
