

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 08 Mar 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A frosty start today, with ice likely in the north. Through England and Wales, it'll be increasingly cloudy with light rain at times. In Scotland and Northern Ireland skies will clear, but still with the odd wintry shower. Overnight there will be heavy rain and strong winds in the south, with gales likely, but lighter rain in the north.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

On Wednesday the heavy rain and strong winds will continue across England and Wales, slowly easing throughout the afternoon. Scotland and Northern Ireland will be clear with wintry showers in the west. Thursday will be milder, but cloudy with some rain.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.