++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
After a bright start for many, rain, often heavy, will quickly spread in from the west accompanied by some strong and gusty winds, especially around western coasts. Eastern England will hold onto some sunshine, although rain will eventually reach here too. Brighter in northern Scotland with scattered showers.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Sunday will see an improvement with some warm sunny spells, especially across Northern Ireland and Wales. However, showers will continue across Scotland and northern England. Monday will then be warmer and drier in the east, whereas thicker cloud and rain will feed into western parts, but it will be humid for many.
