Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Saturday will be generally cloudy and humid with a brisk southerly breeze and frequent outbreaks of rain for most. However, southern counties of England and the northern isles will stay dry for most of the day, with sunny spells, although rain will arrive in the far south-west by evening.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Rain gradually clears the south-east on Sunday, but further showers will develop across the country throughout the day. It'll be mostly cloudy to start, with brighter spells developing later. Monday will then be another unsettled day, with frequent showers, some of these heavy and thundery at times.
