

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 06 Aug 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Eastern counties of England and parts of northeast Scotland will be largely dry at first before cloud and outbreaks of rain spread from western parts during the morning and afternoon. It remains largely cloudy overnight with further rain in many places, although some parts of England may see drier conditions by dawn tomorrow. Becoming breezy at times.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:
Some sunny spells, but with scattered showers on Saturday, these possibly merging to give longer spells of rain at times across England and Wales. Drier on Sunday with more sunny periods, although rain may affect Northern Ireland and western Scotland later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.