Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow :
Scotland and Northern Ireland mostly cloudy with rain at times, some heavy especially over hills. A few drier spells are also possible in places. Temperatures mostly near or a little above normal. Inland areas of England and Wales will become mostly dry with some brighter spells developing and perhaps some hazy sunshine in places too. It'll feel warm and humid especially in any sunshine, although mist and low cloud will persist near southern and western coasts and hills. Tonight, generally cloudy and humid with further rain at times in the north and west.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:
Breezy with showers and sunny spells.
