++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A Cloudy start in all but the far southeast with spells of rain in the north and west spreading east. Rain will turn increasingly to showers as it moves east, becoming drier in the west later. Gusty winds, mainly in west. Rain or showers will gradually ease overnight to leave a few showers near western coasts.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

A mix of sunshine and showers spreading from the west where they will become heavy with a risk of thunder and gusty winds. Drier and brighter weather in the east, especially on Thursday. Feeling cool in the showers and wind.
