

Yellow warning
Snow

Between
16:00 Tue 3 Apr 2018 and
15:00 Wed 4 Apr 2018

Further snow is expected across Scotland late on Tuesday and on Wednesday, especially for high ground.

What to expect

- Some roads and railways likely to be affected, leading to longer journey times.

Further details

A mix of rain and snow will persist across the area during Tuesday and Wednesday but with very little accumulating during most of Tuesday daytime.

Some increase in snow amounts is likely on Tuesday evening and into Wednesday, mainly on higher ground. Around 2 to 4 cm is expected to accumulate above 200 m with a chance of locally more than 4 to 8 cm across the highest routes - although even there, the snow will often struggle to settle on concrete and tarmac surfaces. Snow will fall to low levels at times, but with no more than temporary slushy accumulations on roads.

 Medium likelihood of low impacts

16:00 Tue 3 Apr 2018 and
15:00 Wed 4 Apr 2018

Reason for update

The warning has been combined with that previously in force for Tuesday. Accumulations are not expected to cause too many impacts during Tuesday daytime, so the revised warning starts from Tuesday evening. Amounts expected to settle on concrete/tarmac have been reduced.
