Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
A band of rain will slowly clear Wales, central and south-western England through the day, although perhaps lingering across the southeast into the evening. It'll be a fresher and drier day elsewhere with sunny spells for many of us, although blustery showers are likely to affect the far northwest during the afternoon with a risk of thunder.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:

It'll be mostly dry at first on Sunday with plenty of sunny spells, though it will turn windy in the northwest with heavy rain later. Rain continuing in the north and west on Monday. Further east will be largely dry and very warm.
