++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cold again with areas of freezing fog gradually clearing, although frost and fog will persist all day in places. Otherwise, generally dry with variable cloud, the best of the day's sunshine developing in the north and west. Many southern and eastern areas will remain dull and misty. Tonight, cold again with a widespread frost, along with some freezing fog patches.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

Thursday and Friday, there will be a little light rain or sleet in the far northeast and far southwest, although elsewhere it will be dry and cold with frost and freezing fog again lingering all day in a few places.
