Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
It will be another dry but fairly cloudy day but there is a better chance of sunny spells developing, especially across Wales, western and northern England and southeast Scotland. With light winds, it will feel warm in any sunshine. Cloud will affect many areas overnight but where it remains clearest for longest, fog and frost patches are possible.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

The settled theme will continue although patchy rain will affect the far northwest for a time with the odd shower possible across southeast England. Elsewhere, variable cloud will break allowing some warm sunny spells in places with a risk of fog overnight.
