

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 09 Sep 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A fine start for many with some sunshine. Staying sunny and very warm in the east and southeast, but cloud and showery rain spreading into the west, heaviest in the northwest. Winds freshening throughout. Remaining rather cloudy and breezy overnight, with some showery rain, especially in the north and west, but possible anywhere.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

A good deal of cloud on Monday, but a few brighter spells developing in the south and east where there could be an isolated shower. Rain for southern Scotland and Northern Ireland. Tuesday will be bright, cool and breezy with scattered showers once rain clears the southeast.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.