++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Staying fine and dry for the UK today, with cloud breaking up to give increasingly widespread sunshine for some during the afternoon. It'll be a fairly breezy day though, and slightly cooler than yesterday. Overnight, cloud amounts generally increasing, and cooler than last night, with temperatures in many areas falling into single figures.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:

For Thursday and Friday, turning increasingly cloudy, and turning cooler, although still with some spells of sunshine at times. It should be mostly dry, but there is an increasing risk of occasional outbreaks of light rain or showers towards the end of the week.
