

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 10 Oct 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Cloudy for many areas at first, with isolated drizzle and some mist patches.
Through the morning cloud will generally disperse, leading to a sunny afternoon.
However the northeast is likely to remain dull. Overnight, cloud will spread from the northeast into the Midlands and east Wales, but it will stay clear elsewhere. Remaining breezy, especially across the south coast.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

After a cloudy start, many areas will become sunny during Monday, although still remaining quite dull near northeastern coasts. Some sunny spells and variable amounts of cloud on Tuesday. It will feel cooler, despite lighter winds across much of the country.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.