Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain should gradually clear northern and western parts of the UK, but become heavy across northern Scotland this morning. It will feel cool here. Elsewhere, it should be mainly dry and bright, feeling hot and humid in southeast England. Overnight, rain is expected to reach Northern Ireland, southern Scotland, Wales and northwest England. It should be dry and warm elsewhere.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Rain will spread to remaining northern and western parts of the UK on Saturday. Drier elsewhere, and hot and sunny again in southeast England. Remaining warm on Sunday, but mostly dry with occasional sharp showers in southern and eastern England.
