Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:

A band of cloud and intermittent light rain, lying across Wales, northern England and parts of the Midlands at dawn, will move erratically southwards, reaching southeast England by evening. To the south of the rain, fine and mainly sunny after early mist clears. To the north, largely clear and dry, but with severe gales continuing across the far north.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Both days largely fine across the UK with a good deal of sunshine, especially in the south, although some chilly nights are likely. Northwestern parts will be generally cloudier and breezier, with the far northwest seeing some persistent rain on Thursday.
