

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 02 Aug 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Showers in the southwest will become widespread across central and southern areas, heavy and thundery in places. There will be sunny spells between the showers and somewhat drier in southeast England and most northern parts of the UK. Cooler than Wednesday in brisk winds. Mostly dry overnight with coastal showers.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Sunny spells and showers bringing gusty winds. The showers spreading from the west where they will be most frequent and heavy with a risk of thundery downpours. On Saturday showers may merge to spells of rain at times. Driest and warmest in the east but feeling cool in showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.