Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
England and Wales will be dry this morning with some sunny periods, although it will be cloudier than yesterday and there is a chance of showers developing in some places, these easing later. Rain in Scotland and Northern Ireland becomes widespread by the evening then spreads south into Northern England and Wales overnight.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Rain continues to spread southwards to affect most parts of the United Kingdom at some time on Monday. It will be drier on Tuesday but remains rather cloudy and there will be a chance of showers or rain in places.
