

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 07 Jun 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Windy with occasionally heavy rain spreading north across the country, and a risk of severe gales in the southwest later. It will be brighter and drier across Scotland though with some showers. Gale force winds will continue across the southern parts through the night, and still windy elsewhere with spells of heavy rain, but becoming drier across southeastern parts.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Cool, cloudy, wet and windy for many areas on Friday, with persistent heavy rain across Northern Ireland and Wales especially, and gales continuing in the south. Drier and brighter for many on Saturday, but rain will continue in the north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.