

National Severe Weather Warning Service

Chief Forecasters Assessment

Pulses of rain, some heavy, will continue to move northeast across more central and eastern parts of England during Tuesday afternoon, whilst heavy showers occur further west. Both of these aspects could give 20 mm of rain locally within 2-3 hours.

The showers are expected to become aligned into bands moving northeast through Tuesday evening and overnight into Wednesday, with some thunderstorms leading to 10-15 mm of rain within an hour in places and 30 mm within 3 hours. An additional hazard will be localised very squally winds in association with the heavy showers and thunderstorms, with a risk of isolated 60 mph gusts along the south coast of England, most likely during the early hours of Wednesday.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 11:00 on Tue, 22nd Oct 2013 until 06:00 on Wed, 23rd Oct 2013

Further heavy showers are likely through the rest of Tuesday and particularly overnight into Wednesday, when organised bands of heavy showers and thunderstorms will move northeastwards, accompanied by squally winds.

The public should be aware of the risk of disruption, mainly due to localised flooding, but also where squally winds occur.
