

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Tuesday 09 Aug 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Most will be dry and bright today. A few showers across northern parts this morning will soon clear. Feeling slightly warmer with lighter northwesterly winds. Through the evening and overnight rain is expected to move across northern and central parts of the UK. This will turn heavy at times over high ground along with increasing winds.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:

Rain, heavy at times, continuing across northern and central areas on Wednesday. Brighter across southern counties and the north of Scotland. Further showers or longer spells of rain affecting all parts on Thursday. Feeling humid, with the best of any brightness towards the east.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.