Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom for daytime tomorrow:
Fog across much of England and the far east of Wales is likely to cause travel disruption at first, before it slowly begins to clear, giving some late brightness. It will be cloudy and milder elsewhere, though there will be strong winds and rain in the far northwest.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
It will turn drier, brighter and cooler in the north through Wednesday but the south will be cloudy and mild with patchy rain. A band of persistent but mainly light rain will affect Northern England and north Wales. On Thursday, the band of rain will move southwards, leaving the afternoon mostly dry.
