

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 09 Mar 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Bright but chilly to start for many, though cloudier in the far west with some heavy rain and strengthening winds, severe gales in the northwest, spreading eastwards. Drier weather with sunny or clear spells and easing winds will follow late in the day. Staying very windy with showery rain in the north overnight.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Chilly to start Tuesday, then largely fine and dry with some prolonged spells of sunshine. Winds will mostly be light, though fresh with gales at first across parts of Scotland. Turning unsettled again during Wednesday with rain at times and strengthening winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.