Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Some drier and brighter spells in the south and east but for most a cloudy day with rain at times, the heaviest and most persistent rain in the west and northwest. Tonight, a few light showers persisting near western coasts otherwise becoming dry, southern areas staying rather cloudy but with cloud breaks developing in the north and northeast.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:
Most places dry, some sunshine, and light to moderate northwesterly winds, although cloud will increase in the north with some rain later. Wednesday changeable, rain at times especially in north and west. Some drier and brighter spells especially in south and east.
