++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Generally wet and windy across southwest England and south Wales, gales along exposed coasts. Northern Scotland, and later eastern England, mostly dry. Elsewhere showers or longer spells of rain today. Very warm across northwest Scotland, otherwise temperatures near or just below normal. Overnight dry across northern Scotland and eastern England, with rain elsewhere, heavy across southwest England and south Wales.

Outlook for Sunday and Monday:
Both days northwest Scotland fine and dry, while northeast Scotland will remain largely dry, but with coastal low and mist cloud. Showers or longer spells of rain for the rest of the UK each day, some showers heavy and thundery.
