

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 10 Aug 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain already over Northern Ireland will slowly spread eastwards through the day into Scotland and to northwestern parts of England and Wales, turning heavy over the hills. Staying drier and brighter towards elsewhere with some sunny spells. Remaining cloudy and mild for many overnight with outbreaks of rain over northern parts of the UK, meanwhile southern counties will stay dry.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Rain continues for Scotland on Thursday, meanwhile rain across eastern and northern England slowly clears to leave mainly dry weather and some sunshine for the south. it stays wet in the north on Friday, but turns drier and warmer elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.