

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Monday 01 Apr 2013

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Mainly dry and fine, with the brightest weather in the north. Although bright, the south will be a little cloudier at times, with a small chance of the odd fleeting wintry shower. Feeling pleasant in sunny spells, tempered in the south and west by the cold wind. Remaining dry overnight, with a widespread sharp frost.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Mainly dry and fine on Tuesday, although perhaps a little cloudier in the north. The best sunny spells are likely in southern areas, although accompanied here by a continuing cold wind. Similar again on Wednesday, although there should be a little more cloud around generally.

(C) Crown Copyright 2013. Published by the Met Office.