++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Another day of sunshine and showers. Showers most frequent in the north and west, where they may be heavy and possibly thundery at times. Showers could locally merge at times into longer spells of rain. Showers will ease over night, but could persist in some western areas. Otherwise it will be dry with clear spells and possible localised mist patches.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

A mixture of sunshine and scattered showers Tuesday, with the focus of showers moving to eastern areas through the day. Showers are likely to be locally heavy at times. A mainly dry day for most on Wednesday with isolated showers.
