Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 26 Dec 2008

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Dry across southern areas, becoming windy and sunny as cloud breaks develop.
Further north cloudier conditions will prevail, but still some cloud breaks will occur. Feeling colder across the UK. Overnight southern areas staying dry, clear, and breezy. Further north lighter winds, broken cloud and clear spells will allow patchy mist and fog to form. Widespread frost across the UK.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Each day southern areas of the UK will have the best cloud breaks, and so most sunshine. Further north staying cloudier, but still some cloud breaks will occur, especially in the west. Widespread frosts at night. Breezy across the south.
