

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 02 Dec 2016

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Any fog patches will slowly clear in the southwest and Northern Ireland today. There'll be spells of sunshine for most areas, with thicker cloud in the east, giving some showery rain here later. The cloudy and damp skies will move west tonight. Clear spells will then move into eastern areas, with patchy frost and fog here.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Tomorrow will be a dry day for most, with sunny spells and light winds. There'll be some patchy rain though, mainly in the west and southwest. Sunday will then start frosty, with patchy fog slowly clearing, but there will be some sunshine.

(C) Crown Copyright 2016. Published by the Met Office.