

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 06 Dec 2007

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Outbreaks of heavy rain and strong gusty winds will spread to all parts. Rain will be especially heavy over hills of Northern England, Northern Ireland and Wales. Becoming more showery across many parts of Scotland later. Overnight rain will clear many northern areas with some showers persisting. Outbreaks of rain continuing in the south. Continuing windy at times overnight.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Most areas of the country will become dry and bright with some decent sunshine, but further showers will spread to the north and west. Feeling colder with fresh to strong northwesterly winds. Continuing unsettled with further heavy rain on Saturday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2007. Published by the Met Office.