Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many parts will be cloudy with rain, some heavy, today, persisting over much of Scotland and N.Ireland tonight. Brighter conditions will gradually spreading across Wales and southern and central England today allowing some heavy, thundery showers to develop, with some locally large rainfall totals possible. Temperatures near average. Those showers should die away this evening leaving generally cloudy conditions overnight.

Outlook for Wednesday and Thursday:
Heavy, thundery showers are expected across Wales and southern and central England tomorrow with cloud and outbreaks of rain further north. Rain will move south over northern and eastern England on Thursday with mostly dry but rather cloudy conditions elsewhere.
