++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Many places will be wet and windy today as a band of heavy rain crosses from the west. This will be replaced by sunshine and blustery showers in western parts during the afternoon. Northwest Scotland is likely to stay dry and bright all day.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Dry and cold at first on Tuesday with some fog and frost around. Cloud and outbreaks of rain will spread from the west to all parts during the day. Wednesday stays breezy with blustery showers in the west. Many inland and eastern parts will probably stay dry with some sunshine.
