

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 06 Nov 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Outbreaks of rain and brisk winds will spread eastwards through today. The rain will be heavy at times, particularly in the west. It will be very mild, especially in the south. Overnight, it will be dry for many with clear spells. However, further heavy rain will spread into southwestern parts of England and Wales by dawn.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:

Rain across the southwest will spread northeastwards through the day on Saturday, though much of northern Scotland will stay dry. Overnight will be dry with clear spells. After a bright but chilly start on Sunday, further rain and brisk winds will spread eastwards.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.