

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 22 Jan 2014

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rain, with some snow on northern hills, eventually clearing the extreme east later today. Sunny spells and scattered showers elsewhere, the showers heavy at times, and becoming more frequent later in the northwest. Becoming dry for a time for much of the UK tonight, but heavy, showery rain will spread across northern and western areas through the early hours.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Heavy showery rain, with hill snow, will move eastwards across the UK through the morning. Scattered showers will then follow into the north and west, but otherwise it will be largely dry and bright. Becoming wet and windy on Friday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2014. Published by the Met Office.