

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 21 Dec 2006

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Dull and cold in many locations across England and Wales, with areas of persistent fog and low cloud through today and again overnight. Outbreaks of light rain will arrive across northwest of Scotland today, and continue overnight. Remaining areas of the UK will be dry and largely fine. Cold in many places today, especially where fog lingers, widespread frost overnight.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Both days staying cloudy with outbreaks of light rain across northwest Scotland. Remaining areas of the United Kingdom stay dry, apart for perhaps some drizzle across southeast England. Dull and cold with persistent fog many parts of England and Wales.

(C) Crown Copyright 2006. Published by the Met Office.