

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Sunday 04 Jun 2017

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Sunday will see sunny spells and showers across Scotland, some heavy and possibly thundery. Cloudier with showers moving across southwest England during the morning, these will move east into central and southern England through the afternoon and evening. It will feel cooler for most.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Wet and windy weather will sweep eastwards on Monday, with heavy and persistent rain in the west, accompanied by coastal gales in the south. The southeast could stay dry until later in the day. Rain and strong winds will become confined to the northeast by late Tuesday with sunny spells and blustery showers elsewhere.

(C) Crown Copyright 2017. Published by the Met Office.