++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Rather cool but generally a fairly bright day, with a mix of sunshine and scattered mainly light showers. Turning increasingly breezy and overcast across southern England this afternoon, with rain to follow by teatime. The rain, heavy in places, spreading steadily northwards across Wales, the Midlands and East Anglia during the course of this evening and tonight.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Mainly cloudy across southern, central and southeastern Britain on Tuesday with occasional rain, but drier and brighter in the north with scattered light showers. Most parts cool and bright again on Wednesday with scattered showers, though turning wet again across southern Britain.
