Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Spells of rain moving south-eastwards from Scotland and Northern Ireland into Wales and the Midlands. This followed by showers in the far north where it will also be very windy. Cloudy with sunny intervals elsewhere. Showers continue in the north overnight, with rain and drizzle affecting England and Wales.

Outlook for Tuesday and Wednesday:

Tuesday sees some sunny spells in the east at first, but with increasing cloud and rain from the west as the day goes on. Winds will increase during the evening, and be strong overnight with gales in the far north. Widespread rain overnight, but clearing to brighter weather on Wednesday.
