++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Bright spells and light showers in many places but cloudier with rain at first across northern and western parts. Becoming drier and brighter later for most, but cloud will bring a chance of patchy rain in the west later, spreading to most places by dawn.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

On Monday, outbreaks of rain with occasional heavy bursts in some places and hill and coastal fog. Northern Scotland will be drier but southerly winds will strengthen across the country. Further rain on Tuesday, but it will tend to become more showery with some brighter, warmer spells. However, the showers may be heavy with thunder.
