++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Outbreaks of locally heavy and thundery rain will affect southeast England briefly today. Elsewhere there will be some warm sunshine. However, showers will develop from the west, turning heavy and thundery, especially in the northeast later. Heavy showers will die out early on tonight leaving most areas dry with clear periods. Rain will arrive in the far southwest later.

Outlook for Monday and Tuesday:

Southeast England and northeast Scotland will be mostly dry with some sunshine tomorrow. Elsewhere it will turn wet and breezy from the southwest with heavy rain developing locally. Tuesday will be unsettled with sunshine and showers, the showers heavy in places.
