

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Wednesday 02 Jun 2010

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Mist and fog at first will clear to leave a fine, dry day for many with a mixture of sunshine and scattered cloud. Breezy in northwest Scotland, where there is also a risk of showers, but light and variable winds elsewhere. Similar overnight, with cloud dispersing to leave clear skies in many places.

Outlook for Thursday and Friday:
Another warm and dry day on Thursday with generally light winds. Southern areas will see the best of the sunshine; further north more cloud is expected but sunny intervals are still likely too. Friday continuing fine for many but cloudier in the northwest with scattered showers.

(C) Crown Copyright 2010. Published by the Met Office.