

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 22 Dec 2011

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A fairly windy and cloudy day with occasional rain in northern and western parts of the UK, but otherwise largely fine with some brighter interludes. Rain will turn heavier and more persistent in northwest Scotland during the evening and spread to parts of Wales and northern England by morning. It will stay cloudy and mild ahead of this though.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Rain will clear southeastwards during Friday, with colder conditions and sunshine and showers following, showers wintry over northern and western hills. Bright and frosty on Saturday morning but becoming milder, windier and cloudier, with rain in the north and west.

(C) Crown Copyright 2011. Published by the Met Office.