

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Thursday 16 Apr 2015

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
A mainly dry day with sunny spells, and just a few showers in the far north and south. Central and eastern parts however will be cloudier and cooler than of late. Overnight will remain mainly dry with some clear spells, but central areas will stay rather cloudy. Turning chilly in the north, with a local frost developing.

Outlook for Friday and Saturday:

Most areas will be dry and settled on Friday and Saturday with some warm spells of sunshine. However, the east of England and eastern most parts of Scotland will be cooler and cloudier at times, and it will become windy in the south.

(C) Crown Copyright 2015. Published by the Met Office.