

Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0700 on Friday 10 Aug 2012

++ Valid for broadcast at 0858

Here is the forecast for the United Kingdom until dawn tomorrow:
Early mist and low cloud clearing quickly to leave a dry and fine day with patchy cloud and sunny spells. Feeling warm with just a light breeze. A dry night with cloud in places but also clear spells. Light winds at first, picking up a little towards dawn, but still feeling rather muggy for many.

Outlook for Saturday and Sunday:
Another largely dry and sunny day on Saturday, but the risk of a few showers in the far southwest later. Breezier than recent days but still feeling warm. Still largely fine on Sunday, though some scattered, heavy showers are likely.

(C) Crown Copyright 2012. Published by the Met Office.